Risks of Investing in Innovation

Investors Could be Underexposed to Israel

At the end of 2009, 13 Israeli stocks represented approximately 3.4% of the $222 billion market cap of the MSCI Emerging Market Index.

If Israel were to have maintained its weight in the MSCI Emerging Market Index, then by December of 2017,¹ 3.4% would have accounted for $427 billion in market cap.

Instead, following the “promotion” of Israel to developed market status,² four Israeli companies now represent roughly 0.20% of the MSCI World (Developed) Index market cap.³

Fund Risks: The principal risks of investing in ARK's Index ETFs include equity, market, concentration and non-diversification risks, as well as fluctuations in market value and net asset value ("NAV"). The principal risks of investing in IZRL: Equity Securities Risk. The value of the equity securities the Fund holds may fall due to general market and economic conditions. Israeli Securities Risk. Because the Fund invests in securities of Israeli Companies, the Fund may be exposed to special risks and considerations. There may be less information concerning the securities of Israeli Companies available to the public than the securities of U.S. companies. There is also potential difficulty in obtaining or enforcing a court judgment, and the unique characteristics of securities of Israeli Companies and the Israel stock market may have a negative impact on the Fund. Any major hostilities involving Israel, including hostilities with neighboring countries, or the interruption or curtailment of trade between Israel and its present trading partners, could have a negative impact on the Fund. Index Tracking Risk. The returns of the ETF may not match the returns of the underlying index that the ETF is designed to track. Information Technology Sector Risk. Information technology companies face intense competition, both domestically and internationally, which may have an adverse effect on profit margins. Disruptive Innovation Risk. Companies that ARK believes are capitalizing on disruptive innovation and developing technologies to displace older technologies or create new markets may not in fact do so. Companies that initially develop a novel technology may not be able to capitalize on the technology. Companies that develop disruptive technologies may face political or legal attacks from competitors, industry groups or local and national governments. These companies may also be exposed to risks applicable to sectors other than the disruptive innovation theme for which they are chosen, and the securities issued by these companies may underperform the securities of other companies that are primarily focused on a particular theme.

IZRL has a limited number of financial institutions that may act as Authorized Participants ("APs") on an agency basis (i.e., on behalf of other market participants). To the extent that those APs exit the business or are unable to process creation and/or redemption orders, and no other AP is able to step forward to create and redeem in either of these cases, shares may possibly trade at a discount to NAV. The AP risk may be heightened in the case of ETFs investing internationally because international ETFs often require APs to post collateral, which only certain APs are able to do. ETF shares may only be redeemed directly with the ETF at NAV by Authorized Participants, in very large creation units. There can be no guarantee that an active trading market for ETF shares will develop or be maintained, or that their listing will continue or remain unchanged. Buying or selling ETF shares on an exchange may require the payment of brokerage commissions and frequent trading may incur brokerage costs that detract significantly from investment returns.
